Furs Are Used to Trim All Apparel

Gowns, Wraps and Headgear Enhanced by Display of Rich Peltry.

Fashion creators today acknowledge another reason for trimming gowns with fur than that given by the young woman who said she did it to show she could afford it. Since fur is the distinguishing feature of this season's styles, observes a fashion writer in the New York Times, the best designers in Paris have illustrated the possibilities and the beauty of fur in countless artistic ways. Fancy has had full sway in many of the lovely things from the best-known ateliers.

Gowns of the finest, softest fabrics, deep piled woollens and velvets of luxurious silky feeling, all are helped to the additional suggestion of warmth with fur—fur about the neck, fur bordering the bottom of skirts, fur cuffs in which hands are sheltered, and fur in bands that add lines of grace from throat to hem.

The evidence of fur on gowns, wraps and millinery is almost universal. Almost no coat, evening wrap, street or sports suit is seen without some fur, and those garments in which it is omitted seem to lack interest and modishness. The makers of bonnets, of occasional garments and of accessories have followed the lead of the costume designers, and so there is fur on almost everything that is offered for women's wear.

Variations of Design.
The variations of design in which these directors of style present their models are interesting. Lelong, for example, cuts fur with the abandon with which one might put the shears into flannel; he cuts it into a circular flounce to form the bottom, 18 inches deep, of the silk coat in an afternoon costume. This fur, being beaver, in an ensemble of heavy beige silk, borders also the cuffs of the flaring sleeves, and the high, overturning collar.

Worth likes to trim many things with fur, and most often uses it in straight lines—as often on silk or satin as on the heavier materials. Renee and Doucet have done some particularly charming frocks and suits in colored cloths, bordered and banded, colored and cuffed with the brown furs, fox and skunk.

Lanvin uses the pony skin and other fur. Paton has a flair for frocks and coats of soft velvets, and prefers for their trimming the superlatively fine furs, especially the foxes in blues and grays. Paul Caret is content to add large bands or squares of fur on a wrap fashioned of handsome wool or silk, and Doenillet, whose newest models are severely straight in line, cuts his fur in bands which outline a coat all about the edge and at the wrists.

Cheruit, loving the sweep of soft material and the introduction of a scarf, when it is possible, ornaments a gown and coat of full sweeping width with blue fur placed several inches above the hem, and carried in clinging softness around the neck, down the front and all about the bottom. Present's newest and best things show behestment and comfort for women in the world of fashion.

Any of these is seen on the gowns, coats and ensembles on everything designed for street, sports, or afternoon wear. Fox, skunk, kolinsky, seal, mink, sable and ermine and many still fully dyed imitations of these with catchy names are introduced in evening gowns and wraps. Some of the designers are making the fur trimming of a costume its most conspicuous feature and are using it with extravagance. Worth, for example, does something striking, almost freakish, in trimming an afternoon gown of black satin with jet and two furs, black fox and ermine, and a conspicuous motif formed of ermine tails.

Another creator given to outre types alternates, in an elaborate wrap for formal afternoon or evening wear, black velvet, cloth of gold and seal-skin, broad crosswise bands of these forming the entire garment. In an eccentric tailor, fur skins and tails, as if trophies of the hunt, form the somewhat startling scheme of decoration.

How Fur is Used.
Many models present a far more conventional idea in the use of fur—wide or narrow bands, deep cuffs and high, voluminous collars, or the newest rolling shawl collar that follows the line of the coat as it opens from collar to hem.

Gowns of soft satin or crepe, wraps of metal brocades, velvet or heavy silk are made sumptuous by the addition of fur. Black satin trimmed with ermine is thought to be exceedingly smart, and ermine tails and skins are lavishly used on evening gowns and wraps. The amount of ermine and of sable seen on some of the handsomer velvet wraps represents fortunes spent in the new styles. Such garments have a regal appearance.

House gowns, the things shown by some of the best designers, in the subtle weaves, both plain and brocaded, in satin crepes, chiffon velvets and chiffons; the more delicate tea gowns and negligees of the gauze, chiffon, georgette, voile and tissue types take on more chic and style by the introduction of fur. It is cleverly added as trimming for the neck, or bordering the skirt or drapery, and in one model it appears in diamond-shaped pieces of seal applied on the front of a coat-shaped negligee of Liberty satin.

Ingenuity seems to be inexhaustible in the number of original ways of introducing fur in the smart toilet. A separate collar, high and deep, is made so that it can be adjusted to the neck of a coat or wrap.

Among the newest things from Paris are fur collars and muffs to match, suggesting a revival of the muff and scarf sets of earlier days, now considered quaint. Scarfs, long enough to wind about the neck, to cover the shoulders and to hang with long ends in the front, are made of crepe or chiffon and fur combined. Innumerable novelties of this character are designed by prominent Parisian artists.

Cheruit has brought out some charming examples, and others that are proving their popularity are by Lanvin, one being a particularly amusing design. It consists of a long straight scarf of crepe chiffon that is wound around the neck from front to back, where the ends are crossed and draped to each side of the sleeve, each attached to a wide, flaring cuff of fur that turns back, half covering the lower arm.

Lacien Lelong builds the upper half of a satin wrap of beaver fur, giving the effect of a jacket, hip-length, over a circular skirt, but being in reality a part of the whole garment. Collar in scarf-fashion, cuffs and a deep band on the skirt are all of the fur, leaving little of the satin in evidence. Separate pockets are shown on some of the new cloth dresses, a novelty in detail that appears to take the fancy of Berlin, who adds a band of skunk fur to the bottom of a blouse that has no touch of fur elsewhere in the costume.

Woman Becomes First Secretary of State.

Mrs. Florence E. Knapp has been appointed Secretary of State in New York—perhaps the first of her sex in the United States to hold a position of the sort. She administered the oath to Governor Alfred E. Smith at Albany, when Smith, for the first time since the days of the Civil War, was inducted into office as the State's Chief Executive for a third term.

HUNDREDS SAVED WHILE LINER BURNS.

Two hundred and ten passengers and a crew of eighty on the liner Mohawk were in deadly peril when the steamer caught fire while fighting the wildest storm of the winter off the New Jersey coast. With passengers aiding the ship's fire fighting force, the liner raced for shore against head winds and a building tide. Her passengers finally were transferred without loss of life to the Coast Guard cutter Kickapoo, which ranged alongside after a long race, and then the Mohawk, with flames still raging in her after hold, was beached near Lewes, Delaware.

Danger of Deforestation
The forest service says that the reduction of the forests of the Adirondack region is a serious danger that looks back over the centuries. The forest cover acts as a giant sponge that holds back excessive moisture and lets it out gradually into streams. Deforestation can take place without danger to a certain point. If the deforestation is carried too far it proves dangerous through periods of excessive moisture such as melting snow, which causes floods. With the forest cover acting as a sponge it does lessen floods to a certain extent. The increase in arable lands would displace neighboring streams in so far as forest lands would be taken and placed over in the arable lands.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service)

LEGIONNAIRES TO TOUR PHILIPPINES

For the first time in the history of the American Legion a considerable party of Legionnaires will go by special tour to an annual convention of a department outside the limits of continental United States. Plans have been approved and final arrangements completed for an American Legion tour to the Philippines in time to attend the convention to be held at Manila from February 11 to 14.

Urgent invitations to Legionnaires in the United States to attend this convention and to visit their fellows in the Orient were extended during the past summer. Gov. Gen. Leonard Wood cabled that he hoped "you will send a strong delegation of the American Legion to the American Legion convention in February, 1925." The proposal for the cruise was submitted to the national convention of the Legion at St. Paul and received the unqualified endorsement of that body.

Arrangements for the trip, as worked out in conjunction with the travel department of the American Express company, call for departure from San Francisco on January 15 on the steamer Taiyo Maru. This is a ship of 22,000 tons, is the second largest passenger-carrying liner in the Pacific trade and is considered the finest in that service.

The party is scheduled to arrive at Honolulu, Hawaii, on January 21. They will drive by automobile through Moanalua Gardens and will visit the Pal, Fort Ruger, the naval station, the museum, Waikiki beach and other sights of the islands. On January 31 they will arrive at Yokohama, Japan. A comprehensive sight-seeing program has been arranged for the Flowery Kingdom, including visits to Kamakura, Tokyo, Kobe and Kyoto. From Kobe they will go by steamer through the Japanese inland sea of Nagasaki, one of the most picturesque trips in the world.

Leaving Nagasaki on February 6, the party will arrive at Shanghai, China, on the 8th. Here they will visit the international settlements and the native city, with luncheon at the Hotel Astor.

The group will arrive at Manila on February 11, in time for the convention. Three and one-half days have been set aside for the convention and the visit to the sights of the capital of the Philippines. A wonderful program is being arranged for the Legionnaires. It is certain that Legionnaires in the Philippines will leave nothing undone to make the visit of their comrades from home a pleasant and a memorable one. One of the most interesting things about the trip will be the opportunity to observe conditions in these Far Eastern islands and to see the progress being made there.

On the 16th the sight-seers will be at Hongkong, with auto and ricksha rides to points of interest. On the 18th they will be at Shanghai. Here there will be opportunity to take an optional tour to Peking, then into Manchuria, Korea and through Japan to Yokohama. The main party will arrive at Nagasaki on February 21, with opportunity to take a Japan optional tour. Kobe and Yokohama will be visited. The party will leave Yokohama on the 25th. On March 6 they will be back in Honolulu, leaving there on the 7th and arriving in San Francisco on March 13.

Legion in Minnesota

Gains Favorable Laws

The American Legion's influence in the department of Minnesota is indicated by an impressive list of Legion sponsored legislation passed since the inception of the Legion in 1919. Some of the important legislative acts originating with the Legion or sponsored by that body are: Abatement of penalties—penalties, interests and costs on taxes upon lands owned by persons who served during the World war. Bonus state—a bonus of $15 for each month served in World war. Development of agricultural resources—an act to develop the agricultural resources of the state by land reclamation and providing for certain privileges to soldier settlers. Hospitals—Tenth district neuropsychiatric hospital and funds for tubercular hospital. State soldiers' welfare fund—monies provided for general welfare of soldiers. Rural credits bureau—bureau where service men may obtain loans under prescribed conditions. And so forth.

"There are just a few of the many acts passed beneficial to ex-service men of this state," said Stafford King, department adjutant, who compiled the list. "In the face of such evidence of the Legion's power to accomplish the membership of this department should be tripled."

City Aids Post

An unqualified appropriation of $1,000 to aid W. A. Hedges post of the American Legion in the completion of a Memorial athletic field was made recently by the city council of Andover, S. C. The field, when completed will be one of the best athletic fields in the state.

Claimed Prophetic Gift

YOUNGEST MAN TO HEAD DEPARTMENT

For L. Hugo Keller of Wisconsin his friends claim the distinction of being the youngest department commander in the American Legion. Keller is just thirty years old.

Born in Appleton, Wis., Keller spent two years at the high school there and then put in four years at Campion college in preparation for a law course at Marquette university, Milwaukee. He received the degree of Bachelor of Laws in June, 1917, and was admitted to the bar two months later.

One month before his graduation, Keller volunteered his services for his country. In November, 1917, he was called to Fort Sheridan and commissioned a second lieutenant. He was at once sent overseas and was assigned to the One Hundred and Fifth machine gun battalion in February, 1918. He served with that outfit throughout the war and also in the army of occupation. In May, 1919, he returned home with the Rainbow division and was discharged.

Ever since the organization of the American Legion, Commander Keller has been active in its work. He was for four years adjutant of the post at Appleton. He was then successively executive committeeman for the Ninth district, post commander and director of membership in the department organization. He held the latter position during the past year and was largely instrumental in bringing about a decided increase in the membership of the Wisconsin department, which now ranks seventh in membership among the departments. He is very effective as a speaker on Legion subjects.

MODERN CRUSADERS

REV. E. J. EVANS, addressing American Legionnaires at Beloit, Wis., recently declared: "American Legionnaires are the modern crusaders for the right. It is wicked for a Christian nation to be neutral between right and wrong. Do these prattlers of 'peace-at-any-price' know or have they forgotten that the Christian religion itself would have been exterminated by the Mohammedans who invaded Europe had it not been for the military genius of Charles Martel and the sword of Sobieski? Your national commander, James A. Drinn, advocates a principle of preparedness which is sound, sensible and just. He urges the enactment of a universal draft law which would place on all citizens an equal obligation in time of war—man put or to fight, man power to work, factory power to produce and money power to finance. This is the best peace measure and the most practical preparedness measure ever suggested, and every loyal American will continue to advocate it until congress adopts it. I for one rejoice that Legionnaires know how to defend liberty and how to use it."

Must Use Married Name

When Signing Pay Roll

Rehabilitation officers of the American Legion who have assisted the wives of disabled veterans to obtain positions in the United States veterans' bureau, Washington, state that such women will be compelled to use their married names when they sign the pay roll, or give up their jobs. Many married women of the thousands employed by the bureau have been carried on the pay roll under their maiden names. In making the ruling, Director Frank T. Hines of the veterans' bureau pointed out that the law presumes that the name of a woman is changed, on contracting the marriage relation, to that of her husband, which thereafter becomes her only legal name.

Urged to Join Legion

Members of Washington later organizations who saw service in the World war were recently urged to join the American Legion in a letter sent to the secretary of each union by William Short, president of the Washington State Federation of Labor. The letter from Mr. Short followed an announcement of plans for a membership drive to be conducted by Ralston Noble post of the Legion, the largest organization of veterans in the state.

Gems Used as Playthings

The first large diamond discovered in South Africa is said to have been found in the leather bag of a woman. Several authorities state that in the early days in South Africa black talismans diamonds were frequently the playthings of the poor children.

MODES FIRMLY ENTRENCHED.

(By Eleanor Gunn).

The season has advanced far enough to speak with a certainty on the establishment of certain fashions. Both abroad and at home the season has confirmed both the straight and the flare silhouettes; the very short skirt; the high hat, the importance of color, the continued vogue of the large flat underarm bag, and the flower boutonniere, and other things which cannot be so easily categorized.

Take, for instance, furs. One cannot say that white fur trimming on black is entirely passe, as one still sees some very smart women wearing that combination, but it is true that tawny or creamy furs are much smarter, such as yellow fox or the fox that is like badger in coloring and is, in Paris, called Georgian or Thibetan.

blendings of pink and mauve, red roses and even dahlias and marigolds have appeared. The variety which is offered and the number worn presage a continuation of the vogue into spring.

Appliques of suede are among the trimming features deserving of mention. The tunic sketched is red crepe, the applique being done in gray and red suede with gold threads—a cheery midwinter combination. Red, gray and white, and red, black and white are also dependable color schemes.

RAPID STRIDES IN BRONCHIAL CLINIC

New Instruments Enable Physician to See Inside Patient's Throat.

Washington.—Some of the most spectacular feats of surgery imaginable are performed in the bronchoscopic clinic at Jefferson hospital, Philadelphia. To this clinic come babies who have an appetite for safety pins, elderly gentlemen whose false teeth somehow slide down into inaccessible regions, patients who have swallowed fishbones, collar buttons, keys, money, marbles, poison and other strange and unwholesome things.

Less dramatic but equally interesting are the sufferers from bronchial afflictions, who come to have their inner tubes inspected and overhauled. Dr. Chevalier Jackson, who is in charge, is one of the outstanding authorities on bronchial conditions and his clinic represents the most up-to-date methods known.

It is not so long ago that the medical man's way of investigating bronchitis and obstructions in the chest was to place a stethoscope over the patient's chest and to listen intently to the peculiar sounds inside. He had other tests, but they were all indirect, like this. Now it is possible to take a look at the bronchial tubes, not only by X-ray but as directly as if it were possible literally to get inside of the tubes.

A bronchial patient who visited the Philadelphia clinic reports that the usual general examination with a stethoscope is first made by three separate doctors. The X-ray pictures of the chest are taken and blood tests are made to detect the presence of tuberculosis or other dangerous germs. Then the patient comes to the test of the "lights."

His throat is treated with a local anesthetic, and he reclines on a couch surrounded by the clinic doctor and assistants. He is told to open his mouth and to breathe fully. After that, the doctor puts something which feels like an arm down the patient's throat. This is really a bronchoscope, a tube about the size of a thumb in diameter. It has in it tiny electric lighting apparatus and magnifying glasses so arranged that the examiner can look down and see the exact condition of the main bronchial tubes—the pipes which carry air into the lungs.

Decidedly a Mouthful. The inserted tube is decidedly a mouthful, and the patient at first feels suffocated. But the tube has a breathing hole, and as soon as the patient adjusts himself to this he breathes more or less naturally. The tube is raised and lowered as the doctor explores the cavity with his light. When it is removed he knows exactly what the disease has done to the throat and the lining of the bronchial tubes.

Doctor Jackson and his assistants use a number of different tubelike instruments, some of which he has devised himself. In the case of a person who has swallowed some foreign body the doctor looks down the throat by means of a light in a tube and after he has located the obstruction he carefully withdraws it by means of a tube equipped with a tiny pair of forceps or by suction.

Generally the operations are not so simple as this sounds. There are comparatively few surgeons in the country who attempt them. One case which came to the bronchoscopic clinic was that of a nine-month-old baby suffering presumably from a safety pin in its throat. X-ray examination showed that four safety pins, all large and all open, were lodged in the esophagus, the tube through which the food passes from the mouth to the stomach. The pins were interlocked and tangled in a bit of wool, so that if the surgeon tried to draw one pin up into the mouth of his probing tube the points of the other pins would have torn the baby's throat.

Finally the two lower pins were guided one at a time, down into the baby's stomach—the doctors watching them all the way by means of lighted tubes. These pins passed safely into the intestinal tract. The two larger and stiffer pins were drawn up into the child's mouth by forceps and other instruments and the child was soon discharged as cured.

In recording this particular case Doctor Jackson wrote: "Safety pins should be kept out of the reach of children and parents and nurses should not set a bad example by holding pins in their own mouths while threatening children."

Cases of foreign bodies being found in the bronchial tubes and in the esophagus are on the increase. This is because such troubles are correctly diagnosed more frequently and because the obstruction can generally be located by the X-ray, and because removal by delicate instruments is possible. The clinic handles approximately one case a day in which it is necessary to remove some obstruction from passages in throat and chest. This does not mean that Philadelphia has no large number of "swallowers."

The clinic is sufficiently unusual to attract a good many patients from other parts of the country.

Many Teeth Swallowed. Dr. H. H. Cleft of the bronchoscopic clinic reported on 40 cases in which teeth and dental materials had been swallowed into the esophagus or had been sucked into the windpipe and its branching bronchial tubes by breathing. In 12 of the cases artificial dentures containing from one tooth to almost a full set were extricated from the air and food passages of sufferers. These comparatively large articles slipped down the throats of individuals who were sleeping, eating, under an anesthetic, or suffering from epileptic seizures. In a larger number of the dental cases a single false or natural tooth was inhaled into the windpipe or swallowed.

Occasionally a misplaced dental instrument turns up in the course of explorations of a human chest. Only one kind of dental tool has been found by the Philadelphia clinic, but there have been nine cases in which this little needlelike boring tool was removed from bronchial tubes.

Many of these foreign-body cases reach the clinic months, or even years, after the accident occurred. In some instances the individual was not aware of anything wrong for some time. In others trouble was recognized at once, but the symptoms could not be accounted for. In one case of a not unusual type portions of a crushed tooth were aspirated during the extraction of 20 teeth. The patient was under ether, and it was not until five years later that mysterious symptoms were recognized as being due to a foreign body lodged in the bronchial tube.

Mistake Poisons for Food. Not all of the children who are brought to the bronchoscopic clinic have obstructions in the chest. Some of the most serious cases are those in which children have swallowed poisons which they mistook for food. People are careful about leaving medicines boldly labeled "Poison" within reach of children, because such poisons are recognized as deadly. There are materials sold by grocers, however, which contain caustic alkalis, but which are less widely known to be poisons.

Lye and similar washing and scrubbing powders are of this type. They are generally pure in the chemical sense and harmless to the hands if properly diluted. Often they are not labeled poison because they are not meant to be taken internally. Yet children find such cleaning powders or solutions on the floor or on low chairs and mistake them for food with terrible results.

The mouth and throat of the victim are so badly burned that he cannot swallow either water or food. Ulcers form in the stomach. Patients of the clinic suffering from lye poisoning generally have to be fed by a rubber tube inserted into the stomach to keep them from dying of hunger and thirst. Some recover; others are too badly burned or too weakened to survive.

For the last 12 years Doctor Jackson has been trying to warn people against the danger of leaving lye within reach of children. A steady stream of lye cases passes through the clinic, he says. At one time there may be seven or eight cases, ranging from mere babies to children old enough to read and understand a warning label, if it were printed in bold type on a package.

Any story of the clinic reads as a warning against carelessness. Its most striking lesson is the hazard of leaving any dangerous substance or article within reach of small children, and of permitting them to handle coins, pins and other things that could be accidentally swallowed.

Baby Elephants Seek Food, Wreck Kitchen

Philadelphia.—Three baby elephants, part of a vaudeville act at a local theater, scored such a smashing hit in private life that their owner, Don Darrah of New York, was held in $300 bail pending repairs to certain parts of the northwest section of Philadelphia.

The trio, confined at night in a garage, took offense at sounds from a baby motor car, snapped their chains and snarled furiously.

Fragrant whiffs of breakfast being prepared by Mrs. Anna Dammore in her kitchen halted them, and one investigated by uprooting the fence. Mrs. Dammore, with three young Dammores, sought the roof. The elephants came through the back door, taking it with them.

Baby, one of the runaways, burned his trunk on the stove, seized that article by its underpinning and gave it a course in calisthenics. The other elephants wrecked the kitchen and splintered the furniture before leaving.

Police summoned Darrah, who captured his charges.

Alaska Purchase Halted Lease to Private Parties

Seattle.—Information that the government purchase of Alaska in 1867 was completed only after a San Francisco company had been offered a lease of the territory has been revealed in an interview with the late Cornelius Cole, former United States senator, according to Prof. Edmund S. Meany of the University of Washington.

The purchase was made on an alternative to the lease. Mr. Cole told Mr. Farrer that in March, 1867, he negotiated with Baron Stoeckl, plenipotentiary of the Russian government, for the lease of Alaska by the San Francisco company.

Group social movements formerly made much money through contracts with Harro's owners for coffee, champagne, which were shipped to Harro's stores and forwarded into the interior for action to convert into money. With a decreasing home population, this business is gradually dying out.

The Pathway of Fools

WHEN Jim Hamilton married Ruth Mason, they had little to "go on" but love. For five years they toiled side-by-side. Children came.

Then—oil was discovered on the little ranch. Overnight, Jim Hamilton became rich. The next step was to move to New York City where they could live as befitted their new station in life.

So to New York they went, under gentle protest from Ruth. Jim became instantly popular—especially with women. One fascinated him beyond expression. She seemed to possess every grace, every refinement that Ruth did not.

And this is just the bare beginning of one of the most heart-grIPPING life-dramas that human beings ever played. Did Jim remember the little wife who had labored so faithfully, who had sacrificed so willingly, who had devoted herself, body and soul, to the man she loved? Did she admit defeat, and surrender him to the "other woman"—or did she battle tirelessly, fiercely, savagely, to hold her mate? And what of the other woman? Did her artful wiles, her subtle allurements, prove winning weapons in this bitter conflict between two women, so widely different—this woman's war for a man's love—for his very soul?

Only Jim himself, out of the hall of memories, can bring you a clear picture of this terrible crisis in his life, and its dramatic outcome. Told with a most compelling frankness, and of vital interest to men, here is a true-life narrative that is of even more vital importance than that every woman, every girl should read. It bares a man's soul completely, stripping it of every shred of concealment. It gives an amazingly clear insight into the workings of his mind and heart—and brings understanding of his nature and instincts as no other story could do.

"When Riches Come," as it is entitled, is really a man's love story written for women. Nothing exactly like it, that we know of, has ever before appeared in print. There is a powerful lesson here for all men, all women. It appears as one of the big features in the February issue of True Story Magazine. Don't miss it! On the news-stands today.

Other Heart-Stirring True Stories in the February Issue Are:

"The Price of Fame"—Nellie wanted to become a great actress. But like hundreds of girls who go to Hollywood each year, hoping to become movie stars, Nellie did not dream of the price exacted for fame by those who shape movie destinies. A powerful, thrillingly dramatic true-life story that every girl should read.

"The Evil Men Do"—When Evelyn became private secretary to the great Enoch Blair, his interest in her set her head in a whirl. First came his invitation to dine—then long rides in the country. Suddenly she found herself in the grip of a mad adventure from which she seemed powerless to escape. A startling chapter lifted from the book of a young girl's life.

"Human Wreckage"—When he married Helen Kirke he thought his happiness was complete. Then he met Olga Harmon, a famous dancer. Came a moment of madness when wife, home, honor were forgotten. A masterpiece in the true-life stories of men.

In the Same Issue:

"The Tell-Tale Tattler" "Up From Nowhere" "Through the Flame" "Her Fighting Mate" "As God Intended" "Just in Time" "The Filled Woman" "Why Men Change" "Love's Redemption" "Her Former Lover" "A Strange Marriage"

And Five Other True Stories From Life

A Letter from the Heart of an Indiana Social Worker

Editor "True Story"—Dear Sir:

I am assistant matron in a school for delinquent girls in a small Indiana town. Each evening we have reading for the inmates. A week ago I purchased a copy of the True Story Magazine with no intention of letting these girls read it. It was the first one I have ever read and I have no words with which to explain my surprise at the value of this book.

Tonight I took this book into the girls' dormitory and I told them I wanted to read them a story. I turned to the one in the September issue entitled "Her Birthright." As I read the arms of one of the girls nearest me went around my neck, and I felt her body shudder. There were sobs through the little audience, and when I had finished all wanted to talk at once, so I told them I wanted each one of them to tell me what they thought of the story. One of them said, "Oh, Mrs. —, If I had only had that book a year ago, I would not be here today a disgrace, the mother of a baby without a name and I only seventeen." Another little girl, she is only fifteen and will become a mother in a couple of months, cried as if her heart would break and uttered a short prayer for this girl and for her sisters in this home.

"You feel! What did you think I married you for? Your good looks? Your personality?" She laughed—a mock, a laugh, that made my over-taut nerves quiver.

—from "When Riches Come," in February True Story.

So I have made this resolve: Each month, not one, but three or four magazines will be placed with these girls so they can read them themselves. What they get from these wonderful true stories will give them heart to live their days here, but the greatest good they will reap from them will be when they have served their time here and are again put out into the cold world to go the right path or the wrong. But so great is my belief in "True Story" that I fervently believe they could not possibly step from the narrow road again as long as they read the stories in this book, and they say they can hardly wait until the October issue is out. I frequently hear them discussing "True Story" and with an eagerness that is worth worlds to see.

Sincerely yours,

Teams for HTOF Drive Organized

Members of Boys' Division Will Visit Homes During Next Two Days—Captains and Workers.

The members of the Boys' Division of the Y. M. C. A. who are working the teams in the H. T. O. F. Help the Other Fellow campaign, will meet tonight at the Y. M. C. A. for a supper and to receive their final instructions for the week's work.

The city will be divided into districts, as in previous years. District 1 will be streets between North street, Clinton avenue, Wall street, Linderman and Lucas avenues. District 2 will be the south end of Broadway, between the West Shore tracks and St. James street. District 3 will be north of Broadway between Albany avenue and the West Shore tracks. District 4 will be north of Broadway between West Shore tracks and East street. District 5 will be south of Broadway between the West Shore tracks and McEniece street. District 6 will include streets south of Broadway and between the river and McEniece street. District 7 will be Ponckhockie.

The captains and workers of the various teams are as follows:

District 1—Captains, Carl Williams, Lawrence Williams, William Fixley.

District 2—Captains, Charles Ashy, Kenneth Slater, Harry Janson, Volmer, John Quest, George Lemming, Charles Boyce.

District 3—Captains, Homer Brown, Fred Clark, Gordon Richards, France Brownrigg, Vivian Smith, Clarence Mullen, Kenneth Sickler.

District 4—Captains, John Watts, LeRoy Webber; Hollis Quick, Gordon Watts, Ivan Whitmore, Kenneth Williams.

District 5—Captains, Wesley Hyatt, John Thompson; James Folwell, Arthur Scott, Lee Powell, Warren Hutton.

District 6—Captains, William Hutton, Robert Wilkins; Christy Port, Charles Ellis, Lux Nelson, Henry Blittner, Vincent Pretzsch, Robert Carpenter.

District 7—Captain, Seaman Jacobs; Arthur Bouchard, Walter Schussler, Fred Planthaber, George Williams, Harry Geysler.

These boys, with some other workers yet to be secured, will call at every house in the city, during the next two days, and leave a pamphlet and a small envelope. The boys hope that householders will take time to read over carefully this pamphlet, which is profusely illustrated.

A letter from the boys' secretary is printed on page two of the pamphlet, and tells briefly what the money is to be used for.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the boys will collect the envelopes, with the contributions, which it is hoped that every person will make, however small, and bring them to the Y. M. C. A. where the money will be counted at the closing banquet on Friday night.

The boys, who are authorized workers, will wear a 5x3 card, bearing the words, "H. T. O. F. January 5-9, 1925 Boys' Division of the Y. These boys, alone, are the ones to whom the money should be given.

Dance tonight at Polish School Hall.—Advertisement

- The other assisting artist will be Charles McBride, cellist of New York city.

HAVE WE LOST ART OF "GOING TO BED?"

Here's Writer Thinks So, and States His Case.

The modern world does not understand the art of going to bed comfortably. The proceeding has degenerated into a mere act of domestic routine. We just go to bed. Of the seductive pleasure, the enjoyment of doing that comfortably, we have not the least conception. Bed waits. Nature insists that we shall go to it, either late or early, so we bend to her will and "turn in" perfunctorily. So far as we are concerned, going to bed comfortably counts among the lost arts. And for our ignorance of it we pay forfeit in the shape of insomnia, neurasthenia, jumpiness and the various other forms of mental trouble that plague us.

Our forebears, in many ways more skilled in the art of good living than we are, knew the recuperative value of restful sleep, and they coaxed this boon by providing conditions that induced it to visit them—they knew how to go to bed comfortably.

For them there was no stripping off warm clothing to plunge in between ice-cold sheets, no such abominations as hot-water bottles that heat only a small patch of glacial surface and thereby make the rest of it seem colder to the shivering limbs of a would-be sleeper. When they warmed a bed they warmed it to an even temperature all over, making it a delightfully cozy retreat for the weary to creep into.

If a modern house possesses a warming-pan it is hung on the wall as a precious antique that must not be touched lest the shining luster of its polished copper should be dimmed by inquisitive fingers. But our forebears invented warming-pans as accessories to bed comfort and used them to promote it. Filled with glowing embers and wrapped round with a piece of blanket to prevent burning the sheets, the warming pan was thrust into the bed and moved slowly up and down until every inch had been so perfectly heated that when a tired mortal rolled in between the sheets he or she would snuggle gratefully down into their caressing embrace and go luxuriously to sleep.

And what jolly beds the old folks had! Not the hard, bone-torturing mattresses stretched upon iron frames that we use, but stout "ticks" stuffed with live goose feathers and pillows filled with down. One lay softly upon them and fell at ease. In an old "four-poster" with its curtains closely drawn, all outside distractions were excluded—one could not help but sleep.

Real bed comfort vanished with the four-poster of "best bedstead," as it was sometimes called. One still finds examples of these preserved in museums. But they have been ejected from homes in which they once held pride of place among the most cherished household goods.—Exchange

LATEST NEWS OF NEW YORK STATE FARM ORGANIZATIONS

Prepared for This Paper by the New York State Farm Bureau Federation, Ithaca, N. Y.

New Ammunition in Disease War to Be Given Fruit Men

New helps which science and experiment have disclosed during the past year to aid the fruit grower in his war on fruit insects and diseases will be presented and discussed at the annual meeting of the New York State Horticultural society at Edgerton Park, Rochester, on Jan. 14, 15 and 16.

The waste of fruit during the past year in New York state, because of disease and insects, is appalling, according to the records of the Horticultural society. Officers of the society point out that the activities of the organization in reducing this waste are to the advantage of the consumer of fruit as well as the producer. From the producer's point of view, it is the difference between profit and loss, for a hundred barrels of apples from an orchard may pay the grower his expenses but leave a meager margin of profit. Leading horticulturists of the nation have been invited to take part in the three-day program. Many representatives of state and federal agencies will read papers and lead discussions, including Prof. Parrott of the Geneva Experiment Station, Dr. E. P. Felt, state entomologist, and Prof. H. H. Wetzel of the New York State College of Agriculture.

How Uncle Sam requires fruit packed will be explained by a man from the federal department and demonstrated by fruit packers in action.

The marketing of fruit will be discussed by M. C. Burritt of Hilton, a fruit farmer, and member of the board of directors of the Western New York Fruit Growers' Cooperative Packing association. Mr. Burritt will state the advantages and disadvantages of the co-operative marketing plan.

An exhibition will be put on in connection with the meeting, housed in Rochester Exposition buildings. It will include nursery stock, fruit, insecticides and fungicides, and scores of other things of interest to the fruit men.

Seymour H. Lowman, lieutenant governor-elect, will be a guest of the meeting. Mr. Lowman is also chairman of the New York State Fair commission, in which he will be actively concerned in the fruit growers request for a new horticultural building at the State Fair grounds, Syracuse.

Wilson Says Successful Farmer Eternally Vigilant

Eternal vigilance is the price of successful farming, Charles S. Wilson, president of the New York State Horticultural society, declares. "No farmer, no matter what his line, can plant seed or set out trees and then calmly wait for the crops to mature. He must watchfully follow his planting through the season, carefully guarding them from countless parasites, killing and nursing them so that the harvest will be good. He must contend against unfavorable weather and shortage of help. Then he must give thought to marketing. Even then, although the crops have been marketed he may not stop. While the snows of winter cover the ground there may be a let-up in work, but the farmer cannot stop out of his business. He must plan ahead for Spring and Winter time is planning time."

How the Horticultural society of New York helps the New York fruit grower during his planning time was the subject of a radio talk recently by Mr. Wilson. He broadcast from station WGY, Schenectady, on the New York State Farm Bureau Federation radio program.

Farm Bureau Opposes Bond Issues for Road Construction

Users of state roads should support their upkeep and pay from 50 to 75 per cent of the cost of new construction. This is the avowed opinion of the New York State Farm Bureau Federation and, according to E. V. Underwood, secretary of the federation, the farm bureau organization is prepared to fight for it. The federation suggests raising the money by taxation through license, gasoline or personal property tax. Further in case of state or county bonds for road construction are opposed by this organization on the grounds that an unfair share of the tax falls on farmers and property owners.

Livestock Producers' Association Leads at Buffalo Yards

The Producers' Commission also claimed, an organization selling live stock co-operatively, handled 15.4 per cent of the total receipts of the Buffalo yards last week. This association has maintained first place on the Buffalo market since it began with its.

Vegetable Growers at Syracuse on Jan. 27

Vegetable growers who are members of the New York State Vegetable Growers' association will meet in Syracuse, on Jan. 27 and 28, according to announcement by T. H. Townsend, secretary of the association.

Cale Plays Quarter Frank

When a calf struck the house of George Nelson in a small New England town, it tipped off the chimney on its back and blew a hole through the roof, leaving a wide open and in no way disturbing the top layers of bark or other parts of the building.

Disabled Veterans To Meet Tuesday

A big meeting for all wounded and disabled veterans of the World War will be held at the city hall on Tuesday evening, January 6, at 8 o'clock. All wounded and disabled veterans are earnestly requested to come to this meeting and they will also hear something that will be of great value to them. Senior Vice-Commander Matthew A. Kea and First Deputy Chief of Staff Bertha A. Emborg of the department of New York, both of whom will be the principal speakers. It is hoped that every wounded and disabled veteran of the World War will make it his business to be present and welcome these distinguished men.

CURRENT OFFERINGS AT THE THEATERS

The attraction at Academy for three days starting today is William Powell's latest triumph. Locked doors. Jettie Constance has the role of the young wife, and Robert Edson the husband. The picture marks the return to the screen of good old Theodore Roberts, sporting his clearest and pinkest part similar to "Groups." The added attraction is the story of a woman's heart subject "Temptation" and Charles Murray in a comedy sketch, "The Juggler."

Talmadge "In Fast Company" will be the feature picture.

"Dante's Inferno," the William Fox production, which opens at the Kingston Opera House today, is based solely on the "Inferno" poem, and is probably the most vivid and fantastic picture of that nature ever attempted. The production has created a sensation throughout the country, and has drawn praise for its fidelity to the poem. There will be three shows daily at 2:30, 7 and 9.

The vaudeville acts at The Orpheum Theatre for today, tomorrow and Wednesday are: Hip Raymond and Maudie Brown, "Companions," Leonie and Lillian, a musical comedy and musical. Also George, a musical comedy, and Jack McKenna, a musical comedy. The picture, "When a Man's a Man," from Harold Bell Wright's powerful novel. It is direct from The Strand New York.

Modern Buses for Moscow

Moscow, which from time immemorial has depended upon the horse-drawn carriage and the conventional trolley car for its transportation, will soon have its own modernities. Eight omnibuses of the London type will make their appearance soon, and it is the intention of the municipal authorities eventually to obtain sufficient omnibuses to enable them to compete with suburban electric cars. The first of these omnibuses are to be seen in the city, and will also represent a step in the progress to move to the suburbs.

Broadcast Bill's Radiolays

By WILLIAM E. DOUGLASS

When us boys gather 'round the love to tell our fairy tales Jim hangs at near the crackers, Hank sets on a keg of nails, Chuck parks beside the pickles, an' his brother grabs the stool, the same bunch stops in every day to swap yarns as a rule. Sometimes we argufy a heap regarding politics, the bills before our congressman an' what they'd ought to do. Here lately radio has been the subject for the day an' on that subject naturally we all have lots to say. Course all of us exceptin' Hank has got a wireless set an' Hank is sorter lippin' but he ain't decided yet. He sez he's goin' to wait a bit an' mebbe after while he'll have enough saved up to get a set an' be in style. I bet them broadcast stations have a hard time findin' out what kind of things the people like. (an' what they don't no doubt.) Some folks are always kickin' mighty hard to please each one, I'm satisfied if they keep on just like they've always done. Why, in our little sessions round the stove in Perkin's store opinions seems to differ, but as I have sed before, they can't please everybody, take yer choice an' leave the rest, the thing that don't appeal to you, some one may like the best. Now Jim is strong for beritones, Chuck likes a lady's voice, his brother Sam sez anytime a jazz band is his choice; some of the boys like readin', some the latest despatch but as fer me, well—gosh—I like the hull dern shootin' match—Copyright, 1924, Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company.

Examination of Young Children

By a Doctor Every Six Months Is Very Necessary Says Commissioner of Health—Purpose of Health Consultations.

"Better cooperation of parents with physicians, and a more universal understanding of the causes of poor health and physical defects in children, will bring about a healthier childhood, more robust adolescence, and a harder manhood, with resulting increase in longevity," states Dr. Matthias Nicoll, Jr., state commissioner of health.

It was with this purpose in mind that health consultations for children under school age were established by the state department of health. For many years public health organizations have interested themselves in the welfare of the newborn infant, and considerable supervision has been exercised over babies during the first year of life. The school authorities have also kept a watchful eye upon the health of the school children, but only in very recent years has there been any concerted effort looking toward the healthfulness of the children too old to be included in the first group and yet too young for school. "It is during this age," continued Dr. Nicoll, "when physical defects are most likely to have their beginnings, and when the most favorable results may be achieved by their correction. Many illnesses in more advanced age result from some seemingly minor ailment contracted during early childhood. This is also the period when a child's nutrition most needs attention; many cases of rickets would be prevented by more thoughtful directed toward the diet of the young."

"These health consultations are conducted by the state department of health through the division of maternity, infancy and child hygiene operating under Sheppard-Towner act. They are not intended for sick babies. They are for the supposedly well children. Competent physicians and nurses trained in the care of children are in attendance, and each child is given a thorough physical examination with the purpose of discovering the obscure as well as the apparent defects. No treatment is given the children. Parents are advised concerning certain features of the case, and a report sent to the family physician to whom the parents are requested to take the little one for treatment. If this is done in every instance, and the advice of the doctor is followed the chances for the future health of the child are far greater."

Dr. Nicoll said that these consultations in the past have met with a large degree of success, and many communities have requested that they be repeated. However, the primary object is a demonstration of the value of periodic examination of presumably well children, and their real success depends upon whether the parents "carry on" and subsequently take the children to their own doctor at intervals of six months. The department hopes that each community will take upon itself the responsibility of making semi-annual examinations of pre-school children available to all its children regardless of status in life.

Ancestor worship

THE Chinese pray to their ancestors. But they do more than that. They allow themselves to be guided by family tradition in their every thought and action. The principal difficulty facing the introduction of modern improvements into China is the universal objection: "This is not as our fathers did."

Imagine saying that we did not want electricity because our forefathers were satisfied with candles.

Though we never went as far as the Chinese, our conservatism in the past often went to considerable lengths. Think of the telephone, of the motor car. How much encouragement did they get at first?

Advertising more than anything else has made of us a nation willing to judge something new on its merits, rather than on narrow, ancient traditions.

Advertising today is as necessary as electricity, sanitation and rapid transit. It is more than the system by which we are kept informed of every new improvement that is to our advantage. It is the catalog wherein, every day, all manner of articles are listed for us with their individual advantages.

Read the advertisements. Be guided by them. They will help you in making your selections. They will save you money.
